

What will happen to my bank account?

Information about your bank account when you are made bankrupt

Awarded for excellence

INVESTOR IN PEOPLE

This leaflet covers the questions you are most likely to ask about your bank account if you are made bankrupt.

How will bankruptcy affect my bank account?

When the bankruptcy order is made, you should:

- immediately stop using your cheque books and bank cards; and
- hand them over to the Official Receiver as soon as possible.

All your bank accounts are usually 'frozen' by the bank when it becomes aware of the bankruptcy order. So you will need to make alternative arrangements for receiving money into your account and paying standing orders, direct debits etc. You should not try to open a new bank account before the bankruptcy order is made, because this account will also be frozen.

Some banks may allow you to keep using your existing bank account. But even if your bank agrees to this, they will freeze the account when they first hear about the bankruptcy order.

Will I lose the money in my bank account?

Any money in your account at the date of the bankruptcy order is an asset in the bankruptcy. So it will be claimed by the Official Receiver or the trustee (if an insolvency practitioner has been appointed in place of the Official Receiver). However, the Official Receiver or trustee may release some money to you for necessary domestic expenses.

If the bank account is in joint names, the Official Receiver or trustee will decide how much of the money to release to the joint account holder.

What happens if my bank account is overdrawn?

The money owed to the bank is a debt in the bankruptcy. So you must not make any payments direct to the bank, unless it has a charge (a form of security to ensure payment of a debt, such as mortgage) on your home. If your bank account is in joint names, the bank can ask the joint account holder to pay all the money owed.

Can I open a new bank account?

After the bankruptcy order, you may open a new bank or building society account, but you should tell them that you are bankrupt. It is for the bank or building society to decide whether they will let you operate a bank account, and they may impose conditions and limits. You should not get any overdraft or credit facilities without informing the bank or building society that you are bankrupt. You must not write cheques that are likely to 'bounce' (be dishonoured).

As a bankrupt you might find it difficult to open a new bank or building society account. Some banks may allow you to keep using your existing bank account after they have contacted the Official Receiver.

Do I need to tell the Official Receiver or trustee about my new bank account?

You should tell your Official Receiver or trustee about any new bank account, and about any money in the account that is more than you need for reasonable living expenses. The Official Receiver or trustee can claim the surplus amounts to pay your creditors. If you fail to cooperate, he or she may intervene in the bank account.

Where can I get advice?

This booklet is for general guidance only. If you have further questions about your bank account, please ask your professional adviser or the trustee handling your bankruptcy.

The Insolvency Service cannot provide legal or financial advice. You should seek advice from a Citizens Advice Bureau, a solicitor, a qualified accountant, an authorised insolvency practitioner, or a reputable financial adviser or advice centre.

General enquiries and publications

You can contact The Insolvency Service Central Enquiry Line for general enquiries on bankruptcy on 0207 291 6895 or e-mail:
Central.Enquiryline@insolvency.gsi.gov.uk

You can obtain further copies of this booklet from the following website:
<http://www.dti.gov.uk/publications>

You may also order copies of our publications by telephone by calling the Publications Orderline on 0845 015 0010 (calls to this number are charged at national rate). You may also fax orders to the Orderline on 0845 015 0020. Minicom users should telephone 0845 015 0030.

Publications are also available on our website www.insolvency.gov.uk

Whilst every effort has been made to ensure that the information in this booklet is accurate it is not a full and authoritative statement of the law. You should not rely on it as such. The Insolvency Service cannot accept responsibility for any errors or omissions as a result of negligence or otherwise.

Crown copyright 2004.

The information in this leaflet is subject to Crown copyright protection.

Crown copyright material may be reproduced free of charge in any format or media without requiring specific permission. This is subject to the material being reproduced accurately and not being used in a derogatory manner or in a misleading context. Where the material is being published or issued to others, the sources and copyright status should be acknowledged. If there were a restriction on reproduction, any other proposed use of the material would be subject to the approval of Her Majesty's Stationery Office Unit.

Application should be made to the Copyright Unit, HMSO, St Clements House, 2-16 Colegate, Norwich NR3 1BQ. Tel: 01603 621000 Fax: 01603 723000.

The permission to reproduce Crown copyright material does not extend to any material in this booklet which is identified as being the copyright of a third party. Authorisation to reproduce such material would need to be obtained from the copyright holders concerned. For further details on the licensing of Crown copyright, see current guidance at <http://www.hmso.gov.uk/guides.htm> issued by Her Majesty's Stationery Office.

May 2005

URN05/1167

